

AMERICAN BOYS HAVE PROBLEM IN GEOGRAPHY

New Offshoots of the Russian Empire Will Cause a Lot of Hard Thinking

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—American boys who have to learn the boundaries of the countries of the world and their capitals will have a hard time when makers of geography incorporate the new offshoots of the Russian empire in their schoolbooks.

The realm over which Czar Nicholas ruled is now split up into 27 provinces, which are all federated with Moscow. A new official map issued by the soviet government shows all new divisions of what was once Czarist Russia.

Finland and Poland are not included in the map. Although they were formerly of the Russian empire, their complete independence has been recognized. Also Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, the new Baltic states which have just been recognized by the United States, are conceded by the soviet government to be wholly separate. Consequently there are only 22 new nations where there were only one before soviet rule prevailed in Russia.

The main or parent soviet republic comprises all of central and northern European Russia and has its capital at Moscow. Many of the other governments which have sprung up are in remote sections and comprise sparsely populated territory, with few of the size. Some of them are republics. Others are classed as commonwealths, but all are autonomous.

The Crimean republic, with its capital at Kharkoff, embraces the best part of southern Russia and includes Odessa. This is the richest section of agricultural Russia and it contains the greatest deposits of iron and coal. It was highly industrialized under the czar's government.

Practically all of Siberia west of Irkutsk is included in the far eastern republic with its capital at Chita. Immediately south of this is the Mongolian republic, with its head at Urga. This was really not Russian territory, but belonged to China before the war. China still insists that it owns Mongolia and denies the existence of the new soviet republic which Russia has created. Mongolia had limited autonomy before the war, but Russia dominated it and claimed it as its sphere of influence, steadily refusing to allow American railway contractors to take concessions which would touch this territory.

The Karelian workmen's commune, with its capital at Petrozavodsk, lies north of Petrograd, adjoining Finland, and has recently been the scene of considerable fighting between Finnish and soviet troops. It is a sterile and worthless country, but because of its strategic position commanding the railway to Kola, Russia's only ice-free coast on the north, is of great importance.

Minsk is the capital of the White Russian republic, which is of great importance because it adjoins Poland and the new Baltic states of Lithuania. The Crimean republic with its capital at Simferopol, includes Sevastopol and several other important Black sea ports.

The Georgian and Azerbaijan republics are of great importance because they include the great Russian oil supply which European nations covet more than any other Russian possession. Their capitals are Tiflis and Baku.

Rokhman, the land of cows, with a capital of the same name, is listed as one of the soviet republics which Moscow has created east of the Caspian. Khiva, the first formerly ruled by the khan of Khiva, who is now a prisoner in Moscow, is now listed as a republic with its capital at Khiva. The Dagestan government has a capital named Tamer-Khan-Sehura.

Even had the makers of geography will be, the names of the capital of the Kazan republic, Yaratashinsk, Sibirian Kays to the name of the capital of the new Kazan republic.

Ervan is the capital of the new Armenian republic, which is now federated with Georgia and Azerbaijan. The Chuvash, Tatars, Kalmyks and several other Sibirian tribes have their own separate republics.

The Tatar republic has its capital at Kazan, on the Volga, and is the center for one of the most extensive famine relief organizations created by the American relief administration.

Markstad on the Volga, is the head of a commune whose population is made up chiefly of German colonists who have also been helped extensively by American relief organizations.

Many of the new republics are much smaller than were the governments, or provinces under the czar. Their railways, if they have any, in other words, Moscow rules over them. They shall not enlarge the soviet central government, and later, then, handle their own affairs as best they can.

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND RAILWAY IS PROPOSED

KORE Japan Sept. 9. Korea may have the first electric underground railway in Japan, the city council having agreed to vote sufficient money to carry out the preliminary investigations. The subway would extend from the center to the western boundary of the city, about five miles, and extensions, according to the promoters, would be built as required.

KING OF NORWAY IS NOT ALLIED SOCIALISTICALLY

Denial Made That Haakon Is In Any Manner Identified With Wobbly Element

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 9.—The newspaper Tidnings Tegn, in an editorial article on the political situation published Aug. 4, explains the alliance between the Norwegian cabinet and the socialist party as follows:

"The cabinet, whose party had been reduced to 37 of the 150 members of the Storting of parliament, asked for and received the support of the socialist and the young communist party, whose parliamentary entrance was marked by the failure of the general strike. This party, therefore, was in need of an arbitration law so as not to break its promises to the voters. And it was on this platform that the communists and the socialist party came together. They cooperated satisfactorily from the beginning on questions of finance and taxation. The strongest connecting link was the prohibition policy."

Recent correspondence on Norway's internal political situation made it appear that King Haakon had allied himself with the communists. This is not correct. The king is not a member of his cabinet, struggling to get a majority in the Storting. The king is not a member of the cabinet, struggling to get a majority in the Storting. The king is not a member of the cabinet, struggling to get a majority in the Storting.

King Haakon always has lived up to the constitution, and he never has tried to influence the formation of a cabinet or to direct its policy in any way. He is not to be held responsible for any act of the government. This responsibility rests entirely upon the cabinet.

SWEDISH NAVY TRIES OUT YOUTH OF NATION

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 9.—A new help to Swedish lands considering their life occupation, and probably a unique thing in the world, is the system recently inaugurated whereby young men are allowed to try out service in the Swedish royal navy voluntarily and without being under oath, in order to find out whether they are called to the life of a naval officer or not.

College men 16 or 17 years of age who think they may want to enter the navy after graduation go aboard battleships and smaller craft as cadets under instruction. They mess with the crew and work under the same conditions as seamen, except that they pay for their meals and may pick up their bags and go ashore for good whenever they please. They not only get a practical knowledge of the duties of ordinary seamen, but they may also post the watch, serve as coxswains of the ship's boats, and in general test out their abilities to command.

The battleship Queen Victoria, the station ship Svea and a number of smaller vessels are providing this unusual opportunity for young men who may in the end discover that they are better fitted to become statesmen than naval officers. Thus this vocational innovation is beneficial to the navy as well as to the youth, who is given a chance to avoid making a mistake.

AMERICANS IN RUSSIA ADOPT NEW COSTUMES

MOSCOW Sept. 9.—America may be threatened with a new style in its summer masculine dress if many of the American relief administration personnel in Russia carry out their promise to introduce in the United States the Russian blouse.

The Americans have found that the Russians, who experience extremes of winter cold and summer heat even more varied than in the northern plains states of America, knew what they were about when they invented the Russian blouse for hot weather comfort. Many of the Americans are wearing the blouses, particularly in the provinces.

The blouse does away with the necessity of wearing a coat. The most popular style is a linen garment, cut square at the bottom and not at all like the "tails" of a shirt. It is not tucked into trousers, but worn outside, with a belt about the circulation of the air. The collar is loose, loosely buckled to permit free use of the low, turnover type of the close-fitting, military collar like that of an army tunic. Some of the blouses are decorated with bright colored embroidery about the collar and edges, but none of them is in any way feminine in appearance. With trousers, shoes and stockings, light underwear and a natty blouse, the Russian considers himself properly garbed for the summer.
